Water District Allocates Water for New Use as Cal-Am Asks for Conservation

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) voted 4-1 to allocate 150 acre feet from the Pebble Beach water reclamation plant on August 19. Seven jurisdictions will receive 16.75 acre feet and Monterey will receive 32.75; the other districts agreed to give Monterey an additional 16 acre feet for a Community Hospital expansion. Directors Ely and Ernst, who opposed the allocation, were absent. Directors Pendergrass, Burkleo, Karas and Haddad voted in support. of the allocation at the request of the Mayors within the district even though Chair Burkleo said "I know that water does not exist."

The approval followed a statement by Larry Foy of Cal-Am who said that Cal-Am does not know whether it will be able to comply with the State Water Resources Control Board (SWRCB) Carmel River pumping reduction goals for the upcoming water year. Foy said, "At this time we are asking the community to voluntarily comply with conservation."

Burkleo, Pendergrass, Karas and Haddad supported the allocation, ignoring concerns by their own council, David Laredo, the SWRCB, Fish and Game, Cal-Am and strenuous objections by the Sierra Club, League of Women Voters, Carmel Valley Property Owners

CUSD Plan to Reduce Class Size in Grades K-2

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Carmel Unified School District (CUSD) Board of Education presented a plan to hire 8 new teachers and reduce class size to twenty or less for grades K-2 at an estimated cost of $18,116 at a special meeting on August 15. This is possible due to state funding to reduce class size in the primary grades. Superintendent Joe Jaconette said "This is a tremendous opportunity - to add eight teachers for only $18,000."

The state is offering funding to hire teachers for primary grades if class size can be kept below twenty students. To qualify for funding the school district must begin with the first and second grades and can then choose whether to extend the program to either kindergarten or third grade, but not both.

The current CUSD plan calls for Captain Cooper School to hire one kindergarten teacher, River School to hire one teacher each for K-2 and for Tularcitos to hire one kindergarten teacher, one first grade teacher and two second grade teachers.

Jaconette said "We have been scrambling to put this plan in place before the beginning of the school year so as not to disrupt classes mid-year." While the CUSD is reasonably confident that the funding for approved schools will not be withdrawn it is not known how long the state will offer this funding so the CUSD has acted fast to ensure they

Carmel Valley Property Owners Association Update

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA) board of directors held its regular monthly meeting at the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Station on August 14.

Director Patricia Bernardi brought to the boards attention that the 1,000 acre addition to the Eastwood project, intended for development as a golf course, will be heard by the Greater Monterey Peninsula Advisory Committee, not the Carmel Valley Advisory Committee, even though access is thought to be through Carmel Valley Road. CVPOA President Chris Cayce said he would attend the August 21 meeting of the Greater Monterey Peninsula Advisory Committee to ensure that the interests of Carmel Valley residents are expressed.

Tom Gray of Rancho San Carlos attended the meeting and said that Judge Paik will decide on August 20 whether the referendum on the Rancho San Carlos project will be put on the November ballot. Gray further said that if Judge Paik decides to qualify the referendum for the November ballot that Rancho San Carlos would not appeal adding that he believe the public will support "the creation of an 18,000 acre preserve."

Director Bernardi reported that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District intends to allocate 150 acre feet of water from the Pebble Beach reclamation plant even though the plant is not yet producing the 800 acre feet it is was designed for. Three hundred and sixty acre feet are reserved for the project sponsors and an additional 420 acre feet were initially intended as drought reserve. Bernardi said "Mark my words, that water (420 acre feet) will be allocated whether it is being produced or not."

Director Bernardi brought to the board's attention that the Red Legged Frog has been listed as threatened under the Endangered Species Act and that the Steelhead are being considered for listing as a threatened species as well. The listing of the Red Legged Frog is holding up river work under Army Corps of Engineers 404 permits.

The CVPOA will hold its annual members picnic on September 15 at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center. The September CVPOA board meeting will be held just prior to the picnic.

Correction/Clarification

Last week's article on the Rancho San Carlos referendum by Elizabeth Cowley stated that Rancho San Carlos offered Noel Mapstead "a personal financial settlement." To clarify, Rancho San Carlos offered Mapstead reimbursement for his legal fees and expenses.

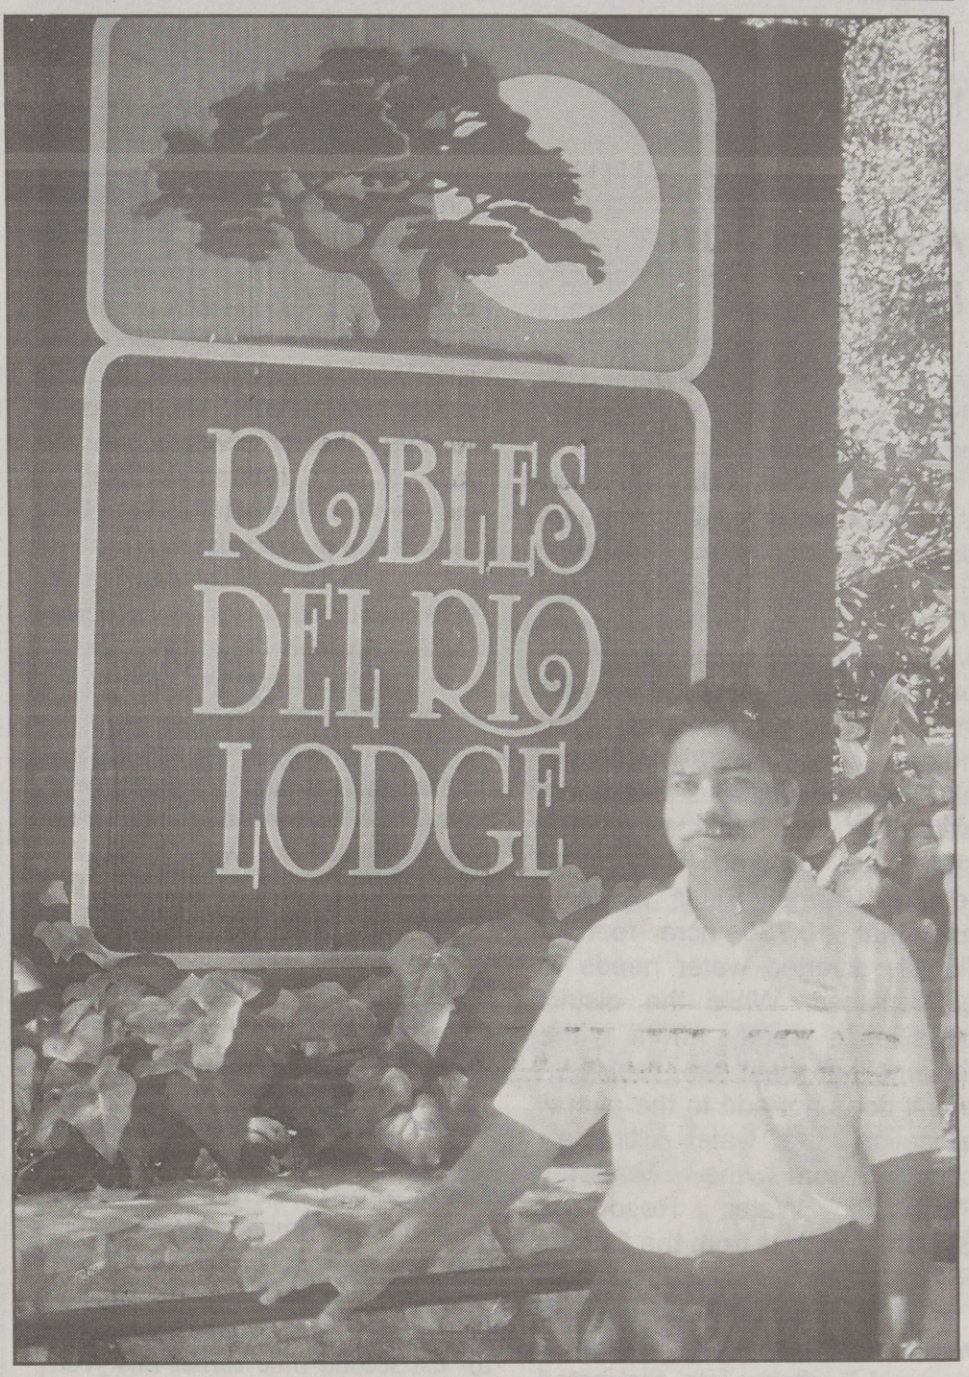
Carmel Valley's Historic Ridge Restaurant

For over a decade Ron and Yolanda Gurries and their son, Glenn, have been the owners and stewards of Carmel Valley's most historical lodge and restaurant complex: Robles Del Rio Lodge and The Ridge Restaurant.

For genuine Valley residents, The Ridge Restaurant is part of the family's lore and relationship with our Valley. Open for breakfast, lunch and dinner seven days a week, The Ridge is known and always remembered for the spectacular 270 degree views of the Valley, excellent menu and friendly first rate service. The quiet full service bar and sitting room are one of the Valley's best kept secrets.

The manager of The Ridge, Sounil Quedon, who hails from an island in the Indian Ocean called Mauritius, spent his first years in the hospitality business working for International Hotels in Israel, Egypt and Mauritius.

For 9 years Sounil's gentle face and warm manner have become a symbol of the Gurries' family commitment to maintaining the exclusive charm of The Ridge Restaurant.



Sounil Quedon, manager of The Ridge.

Sounil married his wife, the former Rebecca Hansen of Pacific Grove, in 1987. They have an eight year old son, Shaun.

During his tenure at The Ridge, Sounil has served many roles: bartender, host, waiter and manager.

Describing his long relationship with the Ridge and family patriarch, Ron Gurries, Sounil said, " ... I love him from my heart ...", in the midst of a discussion about preserving the special environment, mystique and community spirit of Robles Del Rio.

Assisted by Chef Hans, Sounil says, "Everyday is a joy for me as we serve our old friends and newcomers to the Ridge Restaurant."

Association, Carmel Steelhead Association, POWR (Protect Our Water Resources), Cal-Am Rate Payers, Save Our Peninsula Committee and numerous individuals. Directors in support said that the Mayors agreed to the allocation and that people needed the water.

Objections to the allocation included that the district did not comply with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) in many areas, that the water reclamation plant is not yet producing the water it was intended to and has had numerous operational problems, and that it is ludicrous to allocate water for new uses when the state has ordered Cal-Am to reduce Carmel River pumping and that 10,730 acre feet of illegally diverted water needs to be replaced. While the district classifies water from the reclamation plant as "savings" and it does not add to the overall allocation, the water ultimately comes from the Monterey Peninsula Water Resources System and thus from the Carmel River.

In June Director Ernst said he would vote against the allocation to avoid "waltzing into protracted litigation" which the district has clearly done at the Cal-Am rate-payers expense. The district was confronted with several threats of litigation including Alexander Henson, representing Save Our Peninsula Committee who indicated that he will file a lawsuit related to the district's lack of compliance with CEQA. Specifically that an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) was not prepared.

The district prepared a negative declaration which said the allocation would have a less than significant environmental impact. This negative declaration "tiered", or used as a basis, a 1990 Allocation Environmental Impact Report (EIR) that was completed prior to SWRCB decision 95-10 which ruled that 10,730 acre feet of water is being illegally diverted from the Carmel River. David Dillworth said "There is no way the district can say that the SWRCB decision is not new and relevant information." - which would require the district to complete an EIR. In a letter, the SWRCB said the district did not consider the "potentially significant effect" of where the water will come from if the reclamation plant does not produce the anticipated amount of water - which thus far it has not.

David Laredo, MPWMD council, warned the board that an EIR should be completed unless it determined that there was clearly no significant environmental impact to allocating the water.

In a thinly veiled attack on Director Pendergrass who declared bankruptcy for the second time earlier this year, Barbara Brooks said the allocation was like "Someone who goes into debt, declares bankruptcy and says it is nice to have a second chance - but his creditors mat not feel that way. The bank would not let you withdraw 150 acre feet if you were over 10,000 in debt."

Director Hughes, alone in opposition, urged the Board not to allocate the water until the water reclamation plant was operating up to par.

Director Pendergrass said he had to support the allocation because he was so impressed that the Mayors from within member jurisdictions were untied and agreed that they wanted the water. Adding insult to injury, Pendergrass said "I disagree with Director Hughes, that we must wait for the Pebble Beach (reclamation plant) to fully produce because we allocated water from the Paralta well before it was built."

Chair Burkleo said "16.75 acre feet isn't much but if one family can build a bathroom then I feel I have done my job." Hughes said "Those people who build add-ons and use this water won't be so happy during rationing."

After approving this water in the face of tremendous opposition, Burkleo and Karas assured the public that they would not allocate any more water until the district had a new adequate water supply. This statement has little weight as the board had just allocated water it acknowledged did not exist and there is no definition of what the district considers an "adequate" water supply.

The next MPWMD will be on September 16 at 7 pm at the Monterey City Council Chambers.

Rancho San Carlos at Children's Discovery Expo

The Rancho San Carlos Foundation participated in the first Children's Discovery Expo on August 19 at the Monterey Conference Center. Organizers of the event said that more than 10,000 people attended the two-day event. The goal of the Expo was to get parents and children working together, to learn while having fun.

The Rancho San Carlos Education Foundation and the Santa Lucia Preserve had the only wildlife exhibit booth among the 100 exhibits. At the Ranch's exhibit one could learn how to make an 'animal track' field guide, take a wildlife quiz, guess the number of rings on an old oak tree, sign up for a hike on the Santa Lucia Preserve, and receive native wildflower seeds to plant at home.

Dr. Jeff Froke, Director of Resource Conservation for Rancho San Carlos, presented a seminar on "Bird Boxes as Building Blocks for Nature Study" where participants had the opportunity to build and take home a bird box.

KEEPING OUR DOLLARS AT HOME

I like shopping at Carmel Valley Market in the Village, and our other local merchants.

Unlike the big supermarkets, the prices are always on the box of cereal or bag of dog food. From Costco to Safeway, we are too often shocked by the actual price of items that are not marked or improperly marked on the shelf.

It is nice to be greeted at the door of Carmel Valley Market and many other locally owned stores. It is normal to have the people at Carmel Valley Market volunteer product information.

Best of all, the meats provided by John Monroe are always superb. Unlike the shrink wrapped "choice" cuts at the supermarkets, John's expertise insures his customers the best "prime" cuts. Regardless of your meat choice, Monroe's is always a cut above the rest.

There is simply higher life quality in buying a pair of shoes from the Treadmill, versus maybe saving a dollar or two at a serve-yourself place in one of the chains.

Local businesses have local owners who are right there. Their survival depends on your satisfaction, unlike the revolving door of uninformed droids at most of the chains. Why bother to shop at a chain store where every week a new trainee puts you through the hassle of digging out and showing your driver's license?

Most importantly, it is The Sun's advertisers and some other local businesses who contribute their time, love and effort to support the community, the people and organizations, from the mouth of the Valley to the high plains of the upper Valley.

Ironically, we are all pretty good at patronizing our local restaurants - Bon Appetit, Wills Fargo, Summerhouse, Plaza Linda, RG Burgers, Villagio and others. Yet, too often, we drift over the hill for many other goods and services, without even giving our local merchants a chance.

There is a small twinge of guilt we should all feel when we find ourselves spending our precious dollars for goods or services from companies that have no relationship to or concern about our special community.

YOUR WORLD AND MINE

Araby Colton

"Warm Fur Under the Hand ..."

said Sally Carrighar, the naturalist, is a universal human need. I'm not sure about that. There must be lots of people who don't share my compulsion to pet every cat I see.

Of course, in our house, you can't avoid those furry beasts. They're all over the place, the most arrogant little masters of all they survey.

There's Bobbi, the tailless little tiger, who deigned to come out of the bush to bestow her favors on us. She long since decided that the kitchen table where we eat our meals, was her personal kingdom. She picks her way, graceful and elegant between the dishes occasionally sampling, just slightly, the strange things we humans put in our mouths. She usually ends up in my lap so that I have to eat over her.

And there's the big black tom, Hercules, surely the bossiest, most obstinate cat in the world. And he dotes on water, running water. Boy, does he. In the middle of the night he wakes us with the most ear-splitting yowls ... he wants the faucet turned on in the bathroom basin. And he'll keep yelling until we get up and do it. He could be part of Turkish Van Cat, called the "swimming cat", for his obsession with running water.

Hercules is also obstinate about where he wants to sleep. If he decides it's your pillow he gets the pillow and you make do with a wad of blanket.

I guess all cats are picky about their food. Paul Gallico says cats teach others to sit if the food is not to their liking, and look at you with that, "Surely you don't expect me to eat that?" look.

Once I was standing with another woman in front of the cat food stocked shelves at the Safeway, and she said aloud, "Maybe I should just bring her down, and let her pick out the cans herself."

I've been learning from a famous German professor, Paul Leyhausen, about the language of cats. It seems, according to this learned gent, that cats have a remarkable repertoire of communicative devices ... facial expressions, gestures, sounds. As the good professor says, "They have an exceptionally large stock of the most varied forms of expression."

WHAT'S NEXT?

Mel Vercoe

I keep hoping that somebody would invent a surefire way to give us voters some real choices, like really intelligent, concerned, realistic candidates for the President job. Maybe we could earmark some bright looking kids just starting the First Grade, and give them special attention in arithmetic and "common sense" government leadership classes, until they are old enough to run for public office without getting all tangled up in special interest issues.

No, it would be too un-Constitutional. Personally, I think we're losing our country. We can't even plan intelligently for our energy needs. A few hot days, and our power sources, steam, hydro, nuclear, etc., can't keep up with our factory motors and our air conditioners. Food gets ruined, along with surge-ruined computers. In the meantime, nobody has found a way to reduce either immigration or the high birth rate that has become so fashionable, so we're running out of both drinking water and irrigation water, and land to grow food.

Super high housing costs, added to crime and transportation and other costs are draining our state, local and federal treasuries. Eventually, we'll have to export people form high cost areas to low cost areas, like Alaska, for example.

Now, back to political conventions, where we hope to pick leaders with enough foresight to look further than to their next re-election campaign. I find the outlook depressing.

Sometimes I wonder if our system of government, which was designed to work very well a couple of hundred years ago, needs revision like a 200 year overhaul to prevent a total breakdown, but even just the suggestion is enough to bring charges of lack of patriotism, which is almost as bad in today's political climate as being in favor of women's rights to abortions.

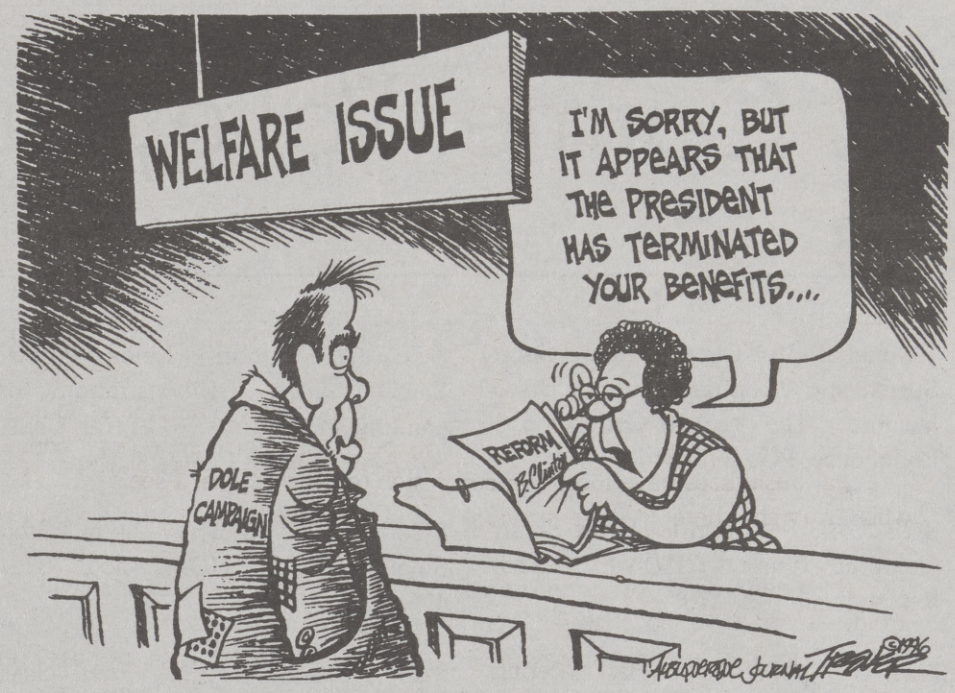
There's also hissing, spitting, growling, tooth chattering. Yes, honestly, he can chatter his teeth, which probably means, says the professor, that he has missed that mouse ... darn it.

And, of course, when he kneads you with his paws he is pretending he's nursing on his mother.

We have, lately, had mice in our house ... lots of them ... in the kitchen cupboards, on the pantry shelves. They've even been storing cat kibbles in coffee mugs decorating a wall. They have to have paraded past those three cats of ours but have our cats ever paid any attention? "Certainly not. What do you think we are? Uncivilized predatory types? Please!" That's cats.



LETTERS to the Editor

The Right to Vote on Taxes Act

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Monterey Peninsula Taxpayers Association has been busy the past three months. In May, the Board of Supervisors officially started the process to impose an assessment on all of the property owners in Carmel Valley to provide funds for work in the Carmel River.

At the request of a number of MPTA members who live far above the river flood plain, MPTA undertook to organize a "majority protest", seeking to allow those who were going to be assessed to vote on the measure.

Elected politicians, in an effort to get around the restrictions of Proposition 13 on levying new property taxes, have established a number of devices. Among them are Benefit Assessment Districts (BADS). The only way to stop the politicians is for the citizens to band together and "protest" a proposed assessment.

The "protest" requirements vary from 10% of the taxpayers for Fire Districts, to 25% of the voters or property owners for Water Management Related assessments. When an assessment is successfully protested, the proponents must either put it to a vote, or drop it.

With the help of over 50 volunteers living in the Del Mesa Carmel complex, MPTA sent information and instructions on how to "protest" to over 9600 addressees.

2347 protests from 2167 registered voters, owning over 2000 parcels of property, representing over 40,000 acres of Carmel Valley property were received, processed and turned over to the Board of Supervisors.

On July 23, 1996 the Board of Supervisors voted unanimously to drop the planned assessment. They did, however, direct the staff to prepare a plan which is less divisive in time for next year's budget.

Which brings me to my next subject - the Right to Vote on Taxes Act.

The Save Proposition 13 Committee has successfully turned in over 1 million signatures to place the "Right to Vote on Taxes Act" on the November 5 ballot. This publicly sponsored Constitutional amendment will add Article XIII C & D to the State Constitution. This initiative will eliminate the need for taxpayers to organize a "majority protest" against proposed assessments. These assessments are showing up on your property tax bills and have been used by politicians to end-run around the restrictions of Propositions 13 and 62.

Simply stated, the "Right to Vote on Taxes Act" will require all new or increased assessments, fees and other charges, whatever they are called, levied against property, to be put to a vote of the people who will have to pay them.

Between now and the November elections, I urge all of you to talk to your friends and neighbors about the "Right to Vote on Taxes Act" and urge them to support it.

Ronald J. Pasquinelli

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 24 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level

An application somewhat similar to a "paint" program is an Image Editor, which allows one to do all sorts of magical things with images. The brightness, contrast, sharpness, color balance, and a dozen or more other corrections may be made to images. This work however requires some considerable skill. A scanner is a machine, somewhat similar to a copier, which can "scan" an image into a computer, which really manes digitizing it or converting it to binary numbers. That image could be a photograph, a slide if a special attachment is available for a regular scanner or, as a very last resort, a picture from a magazine. In printing a picture a "screen" is used that results in many rows of dots in the picture, which can easily be seen with a magnifying glass. If this picture is scanned it will often have an unpleasant herringbone pattern in the scanned image, which results from what are known as Moire's fringes. The effect can be minimized by setting the scanning spi (or dpi) at some multiple of the dpi of the dots in picture. If the latter is 75 dpi, then scan at 75 or 150 or 225, etc.

Colors, as we see them, are electromagnetic waves that emanate from the sun or other source and, in our evolution, our vision became optimized to a range of frequencies from the very short - the ultraviolet end - to the very long - the infra red. This range of frequencies, or colors from the violet to the red, is continuous, that is, there are an infinite number of colors. However, our eyes would have a very hard time distinguishing very close frequencies, i.e. very close colors, and not much is lost by assuming that we have a large but finite number of colors. To represent images digitally, i.e. with numbers, we must do this anyway. In digitized color pictures the numbers most often used are: 16 which, as we saw in the last part, is 4-bit color, 256 (8-bit), 65,536 (16-bit) or just over 16 millions (24-bit). The 4-bit color is pretty poor rendering, 8 is reasonable, 16 is pretty good and the 24 is excellent.

We can now do a quick calculation of the storage space needed for images of various color depths. Suppose we scan an image that is 3" x 3" at 100 samples per inch (spi). The total number of samples is 300 x 300 = 90,000. If the image color depth is 4-bits/sample, the size of the image is: 4 (bits/sample) x 90,000 samples = 360,000 bits or 360,000/8 = 45,000 bytes, which is approximately 45 KB. For more precision use 1024 instead of 1000 for the kilo.

We could repeat this calculation for 16-bit color depth and we would get 4 times this value and for 24 bit we would get 6 times the value. The size of the 3" x 3" 24-bit image would be about 6 x 45 = 270 KB. Remembering that a one page ASCII file is about 3 KB, this little picture needs the same storage space as 270/3 or about 90 pages of text. If you want to boggle your mind, repeat this calculation for a 24-bit image that is, say, 8" x 10". The 100 samples per inch would be satisfactory for monitor displays but, in the printing world, 100 samples per inch would be pretty crude, and 300 or 600 samples per inch would be more usual. Using these numbers the storage space for the image skyrockets. Here's an exercise for those who would like a challenge. For a scan at 24-bit, 300 samples per inch, calculate the length of the side in inches of the largest image that one can put onto a 3.5" diskette.

If the image were a monochrome one, we could make it look more realistic by showing shadows and this is achieved using a range of scales, called "gray scales", between the black and white. However the number of gray scales used is usually much smaller, tens rather than hundreds or thousands, than the numbers of colors in color pictures and so realistic monochrome images usually need much less storage space than realistic color ones.

The relatively large amount of information in color pictures poses several major problems. First is that a very large hard disk is needed to store a lot of images and the memory of the computer has to be very much larger than would be needed for text only. Another is the problem of transferring the information from one computer to another unless the two computers are coupled together on a local network. It can take a very long time to transmit via telephone wires as we will see shortly when we deal with modems. Information on the Internet often moves at a snail's pace as a consequence of this problem, and the large number of images that are there. Indeed it is a fairly common practice to set ones browser to avoid loading images in order to speed up access to text information. A browser is the application that one uses to access the World Wide Web, which is the part of the Internet that displays pictures and text.

In the next part we will look at image formats and ways to reduce the storage space needed for images.

VALLEY FINANCE

Douglas Pease

I heard Mr. Dole tell us that as President he will make us safe from missile attack, rebuild our military defenses, cut income taxes 15% and lower the capital gains tax to 14%. Mr. Reagan did these things when he was our President. When economists took inventory of Mr. Reagan's economic policy at the end of his reign, it was clear that Reagonomics had cut taxes at the top and borrowed heavily at the bottom to pay for the lost tax revenues, and for Star Wars, and for military expansion. The results, as we of the middle class know very well, were raging inflation during the Reagan years and a punishing unemployment rate when Mr. Volker ended the experiment.

Mr. Dole's economic advisors offered him the ray of hope that a tax reduction can fuel an expansion of our Gross Domestic Product (GDP), from its present 2.3% annual rate of growth, to 3.5%. The number has to be 3.5%, to generate enough new tax revenue from business to replace the revenues our government would lose from the proposed tax cuts.

Those among us who found ourselves unemployed last Christmas while Congress and our President squabbled over budget cuts, can appreciate the futility of any new budget cutting proposals in any new administration. That means the 52% increase in GDP Mr. Dole and his advisors rely upon must come from increasing our labor force (more jobs), and from increasing productivity in the workplace (more widgets per hour per worker). The labor force will expand as a simple function of population growth, which brings us to the really critical issue of productivity.

According to Richard Wolf in a recent article for USA TODAY, our average annual rate of productivity growth has slowed to 1.02% this decade, down from 2.9% in the sixties. That doesn't sound like much, but a 1 point increase in our productivity rate means a $4 trillion boost to GDP. And vice versa.

How do we improve our productivity rate? We fund education, retraining, and technological advances in the workplace with the same or greater vigor we would apply to military funding if we were at war. How do we accomplish this if we are focused upon budget cutting? You tell me.

If Mr. Dole's economic advisors prevail, and if Mr. Dole becomes our President, it will be deja vu all over again. Just don't buy any junk bonds.

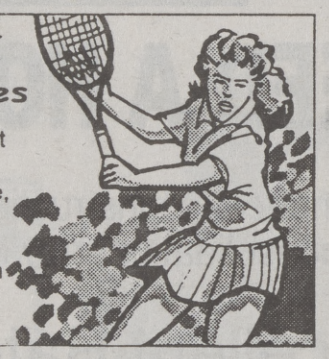
STAN SMITH'S TENNIS

QUICK Exchanges

Sometimes the opponent and you will both be at the net, at the same time, for a quick exchange. In these situations, try to get your racket up and in front of you to reduce your reaction time.



In quick exchanges, when your opponent hits the ball at you, just hold your racket still on contact. If you take a swing at the ball, you'll be late. Hold your wrist firm and block it back.

get in on the deal. The state is also offering one time facilities funding but the CUSD is not sure whether it will qualify. To reduce class size without additional facilities the CUSD will split kindergarten classes into morning and afternoon classes so that one room can be employed by two classes a day, employ team teaching where two teachers share the same room and possibly lease portable classrooms. A long term solution to classroom space will be further discussed after the CUSD determines whether it qualifies for the state facility funding.

Some Tularcitos parents of third graders asked why the district is not reducing class size in the third grade instead of kindergarten. Superintendent Joe Jaconette said that the K-2 plan "reaches the most number of students." Jaconette said that the CUSD has run several models to determine how to hire the maximum amount of teachers to affect the greatest number of students with the restriction of classroom space and that the K-2 plan achieves that.

The plan can accommodate current enrollment figures but if enrollment increases significantly in one school, inter-district transfers may be required to maintain the twenty or under class size limit necessary to maintain funding.

Other CUSD News

Vic Selby and Brant Wilkinson, Carmel High School Teachers are both retiring.

The next meeting of the CUSD Board of Education will be at 7:00 pm on September 12 at the Carmel Middle School Library.
